

School Board Buys More Land at High School Site

Circleville Board of Education last night adopted a resolution to purchase nearly ten more acres of land at the site of the new high school building in the Nicholas Drive area.

The resolution calls for the purchase of 9.837 acres north of the land presently owned by the board and adjacent to property where the new high school is to be constructed.

Owner of the land is Charles H. Walters, Route 4. The land was appraised for the school board and Walters at $1,500 per acre, according to Superintendent Fritz Jacobs. The board agreed to pay Walters a total of $17,705.50 for the acreage. This includes $2,950 in damages to the residue of remaining land owned by Walters.

Jacobs noted today the land was purchased as part of the long-range planning program and it will be utilized for additional high school facilities. The purchase brings the total acreage in the area owned by the school board to approximately 30 acres.

MUCH of the board's regular monthly meeting centered about the building program. Board members approved a request for the payment of $19,655.78 to the firm of Wolfe and West for street and utility work at the new high school site, which included the extension of Clark Drive. It was noted this figure represents work completed to date. Also, the school board is to be reimbursed for a portion of the total costs by Better Homes Inc., Chillicothe, which has a housing development in the area. Remainder of the work on Clark Drive will not be completed until contractors are finished with heavy equipment during construction of the new building.

Several change orders were authorized in the building program including two additional fire hydrants to be installed on the extension of Clark Drive. At the Mound Street building revisions were made in the water line system which will save nearly $500 in construction costs. Two dry wells were omitted there also, and the plans were altered to tap into an existing sewer.

Bids were examined from three firms for chain link fence for the Mound Street building area. The matter was tabled pending an examination of proposed materials. A bid was also submitted to the board for a water softener at the high school—no action was taken and more bids will be requested.

The board scheduled Jan. 4, 1965, for its annual organizational meeting. Members will meet at noon with the superintendent to name officers, submit annual appropriations and set the date for monthly meetings.

January was also scheduled as a time to review completed plans for the new high school building and advertise for general contractors.

al contract bids. Jacobs indicated bids would be received until mid-February.

Superintendent Jacobs reported to the board on the student's savings program that was initiated this year through the co-operation of three local banks. Jacobs said the students' savings had amounted to $762 for the highest week and $536 for the lowest week since the program began.

JACOBS informed board members that plans for the Education - Business - Industry Day, scheduled Feb. 24, were progressing satisfactorily. A 17-member committee has been working on the project for several months.

In other official action, the board approved the purchase of two tripod-type movie screens for the audio-visual department and the purchase of a combination slide-film strip projector for the S. Court St. School.

Titan Rocket Test Effort Is Scrubbed

CAPE KENNEDY (AP)—The Space Agency tried to launch an unmanned Gemini two-man space capsule on a re-entry and recovery test today but last second trouble resulted in shutdown after the Titan 2 booster rocket engine was ignited.

When the countdown reached one second, flames burst from the base of the 90-foot-tall rocket. But they died quickly and the Titan 2 remained locked firmly on its pad, surrounded by a cloud of reddish orange smoke and apparently undamaged.

The Titan 2 and the 6,900-pound space craft were saved from possible destruction by an electronic system which detected something wrong and sent a signal to stop the engines.

The Titan 2 first stage has two engines generating a total thrust of 420,000 pounds.

Massive steel arms are designed to hold the rocket on the pad for 3.8 seconds after engine ignition to give the electronic system a chance to find trouble. If there is none, the arms swing back and free the booster.

The shot was planned as the final rehearsal for the rocket and the spacecraft before astronauts Virgil I. Grissom and John W. Young ride a similar one in the first American two-man flight a few months from now.

The plan called for a 6,900-mile an hour suborbital flight of 19 minutes to a landing in the Atlantic Ocean 2,150 miles southeast of Cape Kennedy. Ships and planes were readied for recovery of the capsule after a parachute landing.

The six motorists listed on the completed Circleville Municipal Court traffic docket today paid fines totaling $110. They were:

Darrell Craig, 56, McArthur; $15 and costs for speeding 65 miles per hour in a 50 mile zone.

Beryl Giffin, 49, Grove City; $15 and costs for speeding 65 miles per hour in a 50 mile zone.

Sharon Ann Hart, 18, 1009 Mulberry Road; $10 and costs for speeding 45 miles per hour in a 35 mile zone and $15 and costs for failure to heed a stop sign.

Linda Shambler, Jackson, Mich.; $20 and costs for speeding 80 miles per hour in a 60 mile zone.

Susan L. Tomlinson, 21, 116 Water St.; $15 and costs for speeding 65 miles per hour in a 50 mile zone.

James Dortch, 41, 610 Garden Parkway; $20 and costs for speeding 40 miles per hour in a 20 mile zone.

Stormy Student Demonstration Is Old Custom

By WILLIAM L. RYAN
AP Special Correspondent

A teen-age boy brandishing a stick or hurling stones is no fearsome sight.

Multiply him by thousands, abandon him and his brethren to unscrupulous and opportunistic leaders, and he can bring down governments.

In the wave of student violence in Asia, Africa and Latin America, the participants' ages ranged from preteens to over-ripe maturity. In the mass they are not just kids on a rampage, but an explosive political force.

How many of the outbursts are spontaneous? How many are provoked by legitimate student leaders? What impels students to violence?

Stormy student participation in politics is an old European custom, transplanted as a heritage of colonial times to Asia, Africa and most of the Western Hemisphere.

This tradition has not taken root extensively in the United States, probably because in a nation blessed with more freedom and opportunity than the Old World ever knew, students had less time for or interest in politics.

But the fever is contagious. There are occasional offshoots of it in the United States, such as the current incidents at the University of California at Berkeley.

The Old World idea — strong in Latin America and prevalent in much of the rest of the world — is that the grounds of the university are sacrosanct, beyond government authority and are indeed practically autonomous.

In the pre-nuclear age, when the world was not so compressed a package, the university was the training ground for future leaders through exposure to problems of political and social justice. The tradition persists, but today it is an explosive agent in a time of intense global contest. The student — member of the elite and a potential future leader — becomes a prime target of opportunities of right or left intent on power.

In the intellectual violence around the world, there are several types of students involved. One is "the perennial student." Often he is a Communist. Often he is in his 30s or older, but he styles himself "youth leader."

Then there is the captive student. In many Asian, African and Latin-American countries a noisy minority of young intellectuals made themselves the backbone of extremist strength. They are persuaded to believe themselves on a rampage against their elders, that they are members of the elite which will rule because, unlike its elders, it knows all the answers in advance.

What these students do in reality is submit to regimentation. They march stolidly through city streets, paced by strutting, self-important and often over-age student leaders. In a non-Communist dictatorship, tame students are herded into street demonstrations to chant prefabricated phrases. In Communist dictatorships, when a government wants to make propaganda from some development, "spontaneous" demonstrations break out before embassies. Police are myopic until the show has served its purpose.

Finally, there are the frustrated students. In many countries they have genuine, or what they believe to be genuine, grievances. They face the frustration of living in countries so backward that real democracy is a dream.

In Southeast Asia, a student told me he believed the rich always would support the rich, and since Americans were rich, there was little hope that U.S. aid would bring reforms.

All over the world, in countries whose development has been slow, there are impatience, anger, deep cynicism among students about the virtues and advantages of American-type democracy.

"Why do we do what we do?" a young man in South Viet Nam once asked me. "Look around you and see. What do we have to lose?"

Included in the proposal were these points:

—That there shall be no university disciplinary action against students or organizations for activities prior to Tuesday in connection with political activities.

—That time, place and manner of conducting political activity on-campus shall be subject to reasonable regulation to prevent interference with normal functions on the university.

—That content of speech or advocacy should not be restricted by the university and off-campus student political activities shall not be subject to university regulations.

—Future disciplinary measures for political activities shall be determined by a committee appointed by the Berkeley division of the Academic Senate.

—A pledge by all members of the university community to back faculty efforts to return the school to its normal function.

Rebels Hail Campus Peace Resolution

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — The University of California faculty's Academic Senate has adopted a resolution it hopes will bring peace in the prolonged student-administration battle over political activities.

Leaders of the Free Speech Movement — the group which staged four massive sit-in demonstrations, one resulting in 814 arrests — proclaimed victory immediately after the vote Tuesday night.

They called off their strike until Dec. 18, when the university's Board of Regents meet in Los Angeles to consider the Academic Senate's five-point proposal. Regents must accept the resolution before it is effective.

Rebel students Tuesday night celebrated the Senate's vote and the 22nd birthday of Mario Savio, leader of the dissident group.

University President Clark Kerr, a member of the Board of Regents and one of the main targets of the movement's attack, declined immediate comment on the 1,200-member faculty group's resolution, which went further in meeting student demands than a proposal endorsed by the administration on Monday.

Savio, Manhattan-born philosophy student, said free speech members now would concentrate on trying to get charges against those arrested at the Dec. 23 demonstration dropped.

Savio termed the Senate's action "magnificent."

A crowd of about 2,000 students, waiting outside Wheeler Hall, erupted with wild screaming when the Senate's vote was announced.

The Free Speech Movement's steering committee issued a statement praising faculty members for their stand.

Only 939 Academic Senate members attended Tuesday's session, but all voted. Proposals won out, 824 to 115.

The resolution would, in effect, give the faculty — rather than the administration — final authority over disciplining students who violate university regulations.

Included in the proposal were these points:

—That there shall be no university disciplinary action against students or organizations for activities prior to Tuesday in connection with political activities.

—That time, place and manner of conducting political activity on-campus shall be subject to reasonable regulation to prevent interference with normal functions on the university.

Wool Market Year Ends December 31

Producers were reminded today that the 1964 marketing year under the national wool program ends Dec. 31.

According to Galen D. Mowery, chairman of the Pickaway Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation County Committee, this means that payments for the current 1964 year will depend on completing all details of marketing either wool or lambs by that date. Marketing completed after Dec. 31, 1964, will be eligible for payments for the 1965 marketing year.

The chairman explained that the 1964 marketing year under the wool program is the first full year to operate on a calendar-year basis. Producers are urged not to let the deadline slip by, thinking that the current program's end is several months away, as under earlier programs.

Producers should make sure and Mrs. William Trimble and Sandy, Terry and Jeff.

Foreign Pupil Question

Educators almost unanimously have praised the United States for its help in educating foreign students. Some 75,000 students from all areas of the world are now on U. S. campuses learning, it is hoped, skills and professions they could not learn at home and which they can use to make genuine contributions to the progress of their homelands upon their return.

That unanimity has been shattered by a Princeton University professor who raises the question whether the U. S. is doing more harm than good in many cases by relieving other countries of their responsibilities and rewards in producing institutions of higher learning.

Frederick Harbison, professor of economics at Princeton, advanced his argument in a recent paper to a meeting of the College Entrance Examination Board. The gist of it is that in trying to help the undeveloped nations where they need help most, by introducing persons with more than a rudimentary education into the society, the U. S. may actually be doing a disservice.

As an example, the professor cites Nigeria. That country has five universities of good quality and a total enrollment of 10,000 students. To operate efficiently, these schools need more students, yet half of Nigeria's university students study abroad. Instead of helping institutions of higher learning at home, help of this kind may actually undermine their growth.

If the goal in aiding underdeveloped lands is to provide immediate relief in the form of educated persons to help fill a vacuum in leadership, there may not be time to develop institutions of higher learning. But as the immediate crisis of ignorance and talent-shortages is overcome, thought must be given to the establishment of some supremacy in national education.

When that time has been reached, as it has been in Nigeria, the United States must decide whether the role it has been playing in the education of other nationals has been for the purpose of helping the recipient country develop its own educational capabilities, or had another objective.

Misused Right

The ridiculous length to which the right of public protest can be carried was exemplified by the demonstration in the offices of the secretary of health, education and welfare. Persons who claimed their life depended on krebiozen defied arrest in protesting the government's efforts to keep the purported anticancer serum off the market.

Controversy has attended krebiozen for 13 years. It was said to have the ability to arrest, if not cure, cancer. If such claims were unfounded, no more cruel deception could be imagined. Krebiozen therefore rated, and received, the most comprehensive investigation available.

The decision handed down by the Food and Drug administration last year confirmed what many leading medical authorities had contended: krebiozen was a common substance found in the blood and tissue of humans and animals and was worthless in the treatment of cancer.

Among those who have refused to accept this verdict doubtless are some made desperate by anguish and suffering. For these, one can have only sympathy.

There are others, however, to whom krebiozen is a source of fabulous profit. It is for their benefit that efforts to force the distribution of krebiozen are being made — against the judgment of both private and public health authorities.

How To Tell Sexes Apart

By Hal Boyle

NEW YORK (AP) — How can you tell the sexes apart?

They have become more and more alike, as the result of the modern cult of togetherness, the campaign for equal rights, and the present passion for conformity.

Recently I listed some remaining differences between the sex that would enable a close student of the subject to tell one from the other. Since then a number of readers have sent in suggestions on other ways that the sexes are differentiated — although no one knows how long this will hold true.

Here are a few you may find helpful:

If it complains bitterly about its luck while winning in a poker game, it is a man. If it hums to itself then it is 25 cents ahead in a ginummy game, it is a woman.

If it takes exercises to take off a pot belly, it is a middle-aged male. If it gives up desserts in order to remove weight from around the hips, it is a middle-aged female.

If it likes to burn steaks in the backyard until they turn to charcoal, it is a husband. If it has to clean up the mess afterward, it is a wife.

Does it hold an umbrella over itself? Put it down as a lady. Does it hold an umbrella over the one it is with? Mark him as a gentleman.

If it hates to remove its hat in the theater, it is feminine. If it hates to remove its hat in a crowded elevator, it is masculine.

When you see it help an old lady across the street, you can be sure it is a Boy Scout. When it rings your doorbell and asks how many boxes of cookies do you want, it is a Girl Scout.

If it frets about losing its hair, it is a man. If it frets about losing its looks, it is a woman. If it can't remember where it left a needle, it's a wife. If it can't remember an anniversary, it's a husband.

By these signs you can usually tell a him from a her.

On the other hand, if it wears tuxedo pants, it may be either a young lady or a bull fighter. And if it wears skirts above the knees, it could be either a young lady or a visiting Scotsman.

Sometimes you just can't be sure. The gender of the sexes is getting more mysterious every year.

Speaking of YOUR HEALTH...

By LESTER L. COLEMAN, M.D.

What is a polyp of the bladder? Can it become cancerous?

A polyp of the bladder is a tumor attached to the inner lining of the bladder by a thin strip of tissue.

In most instances polyps are benign (non-malignant) and not dangerous. Under certain circumstances, like longstanding irritation by inflammation, polyps sometimes undergo some malignant change.

It is for this very reason that the advice and judgment of the surgeon must be followed if it is his decision to remove the polyp.

What is the meaning of seeing moving spots and streaks in front of the eye?

These are called "floaters". They occur frequently and are sometimes related to a high degree of nearsightedness. They usually are not dangerous, even though they tend to persist. They are more annoying than serious.

These are called "floaters," condition called scotoma in which a "blind spot" occurs in the field of vision.

Floaters and scotomata should be examined, especially for the advantage of assurance that the condition is not dangerous. Since there are so many variations, the exact diagnosis can be determined by the many ingenious optical devices that are now used by specialists in diseases of the eye.

Is "Boeck's sarcoid" another name for tuberculosis?

No, they are not the same. For many years Boeck's sarcoid was identified with tuberculosis because of some similarities in the course of the diseases.

Many patients with Boeck's sarcoid may have no definitive symptoms, and the disease is discovered only during a routine examination. The outlook for the condition is fairly good, depending on its extent or distribution.

Is it possible to continue a healthy, normal life after one kidney is removed?

When the remaining kidney is normal, it can adequately perform the functions that were previously performed by two. This is one of the remarkable safeguards of the body.

People with one healthy kidney can live as actively and productively as those with two kidneys. It is for this reason that people who have donated a kidney for transplantation survive and flourish in their own health, and in the special joy of having given health to another.

Can nail polish cause an allergy?

Almost any known substance can produce an allergic reaction. It is certainly possible for some people to be allergic to the chemicals in nail polish.

Dean Burch at Bay

By John Chamberlain

The effects of the liberal Republicans' tactics in trying to blitz Dean Burch out of his job as head of the party's National Committee would seem to be an object lesson in how not to go about getting a proud and able man to step down.

What the liberals have done is to demand a symbolic sacrifice. But it so happens that it is Barry Goldwater, not Dean Burch, who has been the symbol of Republican conservatism. In suggesting that Burch should allow himself to be made an ersatz, or substitute, victim for the real symbol, the liberals have struck a lot of things that any self-respecting human being would be bound to defend.

One: they have challenged a decent man's sense of loyalty to the person who gave him his job. Two: the liberals have, in effect, denied Burch's competence, and what man of mettle could let them get away with that? Three: the liberals have outraged Burch's sense of logic by misinterpreting the nature of Republican opportunities during the next four or eight years. (If liberalism suffices to answer the terrifying problems that will surely continue to arise, there will be no opportunity for a big Republican comeback anyway. If, on the other hand, Great Society liberalism fails to keep the flag of peace and prosperity flying, the Republicans had darned well better have some plausible alternatives ready).

In attacking Dean Burch's feelings of loyalty and competence and in questioning his sense of logic, the liberals have only succeeded in firming up the man's resolution to see his job through. He is extraordinarily lucid in his defense of himself. You do not begin to recreate harmony, he says, by throwing a wet rag in the face of an unsuccessful candidate on the day after lost the election. You do not begin to widen a party's appeal by excluding the people who have fought and bled through an exhausting campaign. You do not build a reputation for loyalty by suddenly rewarding a score of newly-hatched organizations—the Ripon Society, the promoters of a new monthly magazine to be called "Project '68", the Walter S. Mack National Committee of Republicans and Independents for Johnson, the Council of Republican Organizations in New York City—that had helped sabotage a man who, in the days when liberals controlled the party, had been a great money-raiser for an Eisenhower and a Nixon.

Dean Burch would seem to be in a good position at this moment because the "meat axe" tactics of Governor Robert E. Smylie of Idaho have created the impression that certain governors are more interested in pursuing a vendetta than they are in long-term revitalization of the party.

The national party business of a governor for 1966 is, after all, to help send Republicans to Congress. It is true that, to do this, they need the help of a lively national committee. But even before the governors could come up with anything more constructive than a demand for a symbolic blood sacrifice, Burch had already posed some long-term plans for an effective national organization.

He has ideas about financing the party through small contributions collected well in advance of election-year necessity. He has ideas about constituting task forces to "define problems", on the theory that "a problem well-defined is already half-solved." He wants to put the Republican Party on what he calls a "COPE basis" — referring to the AFL-CIO Committee on Political Education — of doing a "seven-day-a-week, eight-hours-a-day job" for four years. He thinks the party should get itself off the hook of dependence on civil rights in the South, and he looks to create deep "two-party soil" in all eleven states of the old Confederacy. He thinks the party should pay special attention to the suburbs of the big cities and that it should make a pitch for the American of "non-vested interests" in the $6,000 to $8,000 per year category.

This was Dean Burch on the eve of the Republican governors' meeting in Denver. He didn't sound like a man who could be easily shaken.

The Business World

By Sam Dawson

NEW YORK (AP) — Business and equipment.

promises to start next year with a rush of expansion. But how long this will keep up is in doubt. And two clues to this being watched now are tightening profit margins and the current uncertainty in the money markets.

Profits started in the first half of 1964 and then held about steady during the summer months. A renewed forward surge in the final months is hoped for but the costs of strikes and other production slowdowns are yet to be tallied. Many industries are counting on sales totals continuing to mount. But many are finding that it's taking more sales dollars these days to produce profit dollars than it did a few months back. That is because production and distribution costs continue to rise, while in most cases it's been next to impossible to raise prices.

And the urge to expand depends to marked degree on the prospects for comparable profit yields. The margin of profits to sales contracted sharply in the final years of the 1950s and that did much to stem the flow of corporate funds into new plants

The margin has expanded in the last few years and this has done much to persuade corporate executives to order another round of expansion.

This year's outlay of about $44.6 billion is 14 per cent higher than the year before. Government estimates now put capital spending in the first half of 1965 at around 8 per cent higher than this year.

Whether businessmen go through with these intentions depends on how business looks a few months from now. The business spending intentions announced this week by the government were surveyed before a flareup in international money markets cast uncertainty on the future cost of borrowing. U.S. short-term interest rates were raised in response to the jump in the Bank of England bank rate to support a faltering pound sterling.

Official raising of long-term rates here didn't follow. In practice, however, businessmen dicker with their banks and the official rates are guides, not guarantees, of what business loans will cost.

Financial circles are saying it may be a month or two before the course of interest rates is clear. And business spending plans may be determined on the cost of financing them — and on the prospects of getting a profit return deemed worthwhile.

Seiberling To Sell Its Tire Branch

AKRON, Ohio (AP)—Seiberling Rubber Co. says today it is negotiating to sell its tire division, which has been losing money for several years. The prospective buyer was not identified.

Harry P. Schrank, Seiberling president, declined to name the purchaser but said the sale would be for cash and that the company's other divisions—plastics, shoe products and automobile mats—would not be a part of the transaction.

Schrank and Edward O. Lamb, Toledo industrialist who is the Seiberling board chairman, said in a joint statement:

"This appears to be in the best interests of the public, the employees, the distributors and the stockholders of Seiberling."

The transaction would be subject to clearance by federal regulatory agencies and the approval of Seiberling stockholders. A stockholders' meeting would be held shortly after clearance was obtained, the announcement said.

The cash which Seiberling would receive from this transaction would enable it to develop and expand its remaining divisions and substantially reduce its indebtedness, the announcement said.

For some time, Seiberling has been diversifying its activities, both in this country and abroad.

Dear Abby: You're Out!

DEAR ABBY: I am a divorcee, 29, with two children and am considered attractive. About a year ago I spotted an eligible bachelor in town, so I moved into his apartment building hoping to make his acquaintance. I made his acquaintance all right, but that's about all. He says hello pleasantly when we meet in the hall, but I've never been able to get him into my apartment. I telephoned him one evening to tell him my bedroom window was stuck (it really was) so he sent a janitor up with a hammer. He's not going with anybody special and he's not a goody-goody because I've seen him entertain women in his apartment. None of them is as attractive as I. How can I get him interested without having it look like I'm chasing him?

GETTING NOWHERE
DEAR GETTING: It's not easy to chase a man without having it "look like" you're doing what you're doing. Face it. He's not interested in you. And any more moves in his direction will make your scheming so obvious that he's apt to hide when he sees you coming.

DEAR ABBY: I was one of nine children in a very poor family so I had to quit school in the 6th grade. I always wanted to get a better education but I never had the chance. I feel so bad when my 8th grade son asks me to help him with his homework and I am too dumb to help him. My husband can't help him either, as he never got through the 7th grade himself. I asked around and found out there is a night school for grownups. I could go four nights a week from 6 to 8. My husband laughed at me and said he never heard of a 32-year-old woman going back to school. My heart is broken. Please tell me what to do.

WANTS TO LEARN
DEAR WANTS: Your husband should quit laughing long enough to learn a few things. Adult education has been a lifesaver to many who have decided to complete their educations in their 40's, 50's and 60's. You are to be commended.

DEAR ABBY: I live in a very nosy neighborhood. Yesterday, the woman next door ran to her window the minute she heard a car pull up in front of my house. I saw her peeking through her Venetian blinds. And she saw me, too. Then she called me on the phone and said, "I didn't mean to be nosy. I just wanted to see who it was, and by the way, I didn't recognize him. Who WAS he?" Another neighbor stopped me in front of my house and said she had heard I was collecting Social Security and she was curious to know if I got it by the month or by the week and how much was it.

I have always minded my own business and have never seen the equal of such nerve. I am not able to cope with it. What do you suggest?

FLABBERGASTED
DEAR FLABBERGASTED: Go on minding your own business and ignore those who insist on helping you do it.

DEAR ABBY: How can my husband and I invite friends for dinner, but tactfully ask them not to bring their children? Abby, we love children, and have three of our own, but we never drag them along to the homes of friends when we are invited for dinner. Would it be rude if I said specifically please to leave their children at home?

MRS. H. IN ONTARIO
DEAR MRS. H.: If you don't want people who "bring their children," don't invite people who "bring their children."

MARCH OF DIMES volunteers aid in easing the psychological and other problems confronting parents of children with birth defects. Above, at Mankato, Minn., parents and members of March of Dimes chapter listen to lecture on birth defects by Dr. Warren Warwick, pediatrician, of University of Minnesota Medical School.

March of Dimes Workers Bolster Morale of Parents

Picture a child crippled by a severe birth defect. A tragedy? Unmistakably. But how severe are the effects on the parents of this child? What is the extent of their shock and suffering?

Dr. Hans Zellweger, a well-known professor of pediatrics and genetics at the State University of Iowa College of Medicine and medical director of the March of Dimes-supported Birth Defects Center there, reports that in his experience 80 per cent of the parents of defective babies harbor unwarranted feelings of guilt.

He believes that they, like their afflicted child, need help. For that reason he is about to organize group therapy "classes" in which troubled parents can talk among themselves and with medical experts to discuss the problems created by this family tragedy.

Dr. Zellweger points out that more than a quarter of a million babies are born every year in the United States with birth defects — among them blindness, deafness, missing extremities, imperfect spines and nervous systems, and many other crippling disorders. Feelings of guilt and humiliation in the parents of these children are commonplace and have been for centuries. He explains that unfortunately this sense of shame persists even in the "enlightened" 20th century, although the individual pediatrician today does all he or she can to combat it.

Help for those grief- and guilt-stricken parents is being provided by March of Dimes chapters on a growing scale in several sections of the country. "Actually, most of these parents aren't in need of medical treatment, but they are in need of some psychiatric help and the opportunity to talk over their problems with others similarly afflicted," according to Dr. Virginia Apgar, director of the division of congenital malformations of The National Foundation-March of Dimes.

"Also, they are in need of a healthy dose of truth about birth defects," she adds. "That truth is that so far as medical science knows, by far the majority of parents of a defective baby have no reason to reproach themselves, or to point the finger of suspicion at the other partner in marriage."

March of Dimes chapters in five Minnesota counties now hold meetings of parents each month to discuss means of ridding themselves of their unjustified feelings of self-reproach. Usually they are also addressed by a pediatrician and are informed about the progress of March of Dimes research grants in birth defects at leading university-affiliated medical centers and laboratories across the nation.

At Houston, Tex., the Harris County Chapter has established a Spina Bifida Educational Association which meets monthly in a seminar room at Texas Children's Hospital. Fifteen to 20 sets of parents attend the evening lecture, exchange "traumatic" experiences, and discuss such practical problems as getting their handicapped small children into the elementary schools.

Up to 75 parents attend the monthly gatherings of the Child Development Center Parents Group, at Children's Hospital, San Francisco. Half of the necessary financial support comes from the funds of the March of Dimes-financed Birth Defects Center at the hospital.

All the sponsoring chapters find enthusiastic and well-informed volunteers at these meetings on whom to call for help during the March of Dimes campaign each January when funds are raised nationally.

Other March of Dimes chapters around the country are planning similar projects to banish needless feelings of guilt among parents of children with defects.

"HIT" AND MISS—Mrs. Peggy Joht, 22, and Robert Pitz (right), said to be her bartender-boyfriend, face arraignment in Buffalo for allegedly letting a $1,500 contract for a "hit," or gangland-style execution of her husband, Paul. Police say the rebut never came off because the hired guns turned out to be undercover police officers, one of whom was Sgt. Samuel Giambrone (rear).

Domer Wins Chance for New Trial

CANTON, Ohio (AP) —The Eighth District Court of Appeals reversed Tuesday the conviction of Robert K. Domer in the fire death of Howard F. Riddle and ordered a new trial for the onetime Canton businessman.

The appeals court said the trial should have been in Wayne instead of Stark County, where the 45-year-old Domer was convicted of first-degree murder a year ago and sentenced to death. Domer is in Death Row in Ohio Penitentiary.

The ruling upset the decision of a three-judge panel that convicted Domer of the April 23, 1963, slaying.

Riddle, 54-year-old Akron Fur peddler, was found dead in Domer's burned automobile in a field in Wayne County near the Wayne-Stark County line. Domer was accused of killing Riddle in an attempt to fake his own death so that his wife could collect some $228,000 in personal insurance.

'Commercialized' Yule Postage Stamps Decried

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Melvin R. Laird has criticized the 1964 Yuletide postal stamp and urged issuance of Christmas stamps with a religious theme such as a Nativity scene — "not the commercialized symbol of a Christmas tree or Santa Claus."

In a letter to Postmaster General John A. Gronouski, the Wisconsin Republican said many controversial issues have arisen in recent years over the principle of separation of church and state.

"There is one issue, however, over which there should be no controversy because it is no church and state," Laird wrote. "That issue is the annual issuance of Christmas stamps by the Post Office Department. "Again this year the Post Office has issued a highly commercialized stamp which purports to convey the 'spirit' of Christmas but which in no way symbolizes the true meaning of Christmas."

He has urged for years, Laird said, and in the past has introduced legislation calling on the Post Office Department to use the Nativity scene on its annual Christmas stamp.

The Post Office Department's special stamp committee, Laird said, turned down the Nativity scene for a Christmas stamp on the basis that it would commemorate a religious holiday.

"This argument has no relevance to this issue," he wrote. "Christmas is celebrated each year to honor the birthday of Jesus Christ. Even those who do not acknowledge Him as the Son of God recognize that He was a great figure in history."

"A Christmas stamp commemorating His birthday should in some way convey that fact and not the commercialized symbol of a Christmas tree or Santa Claus."

Christ is the spiritual leader of millions of Americans and of millions the world over, Laird said.

Christmas mailers will have a choice of four seasonal red and green 5-cent stamps. The Post Office Department says the design is the first time in its history that such a four-in-one issue has been offered.

A buyer of a sheet of 100 Christmas stamps will get 25 stamps of each subject—a sprig of holly, mistletoe, pine cones and poinsettia.

HENDERSON, Ky. (AP) — Henderson police received a report of a hole in a city street and dispatched officer Sherman Hill to investigate.

Hill said the front wheel of his cruiser went through the surfacing which had been undermined by a leaking sewer.

SANTA and the SINGING TURTLE

Synopsis: Prince Chad and the one-eyed Snowman into the hollowed-out oak tree. It was empty except for a rusty old washtub that hung from a dead limb by a rope.

CHAPTER FIVE A Dizzy Ride

George led the Prince and the one-eyed Snowman into the hollowed-out oak tree. It was empty except for a rusty old washtub that hung from a dead limb by a rope.

"Is this Hoppy Hope and Pray's railway?" asked the Prince in astonishment.

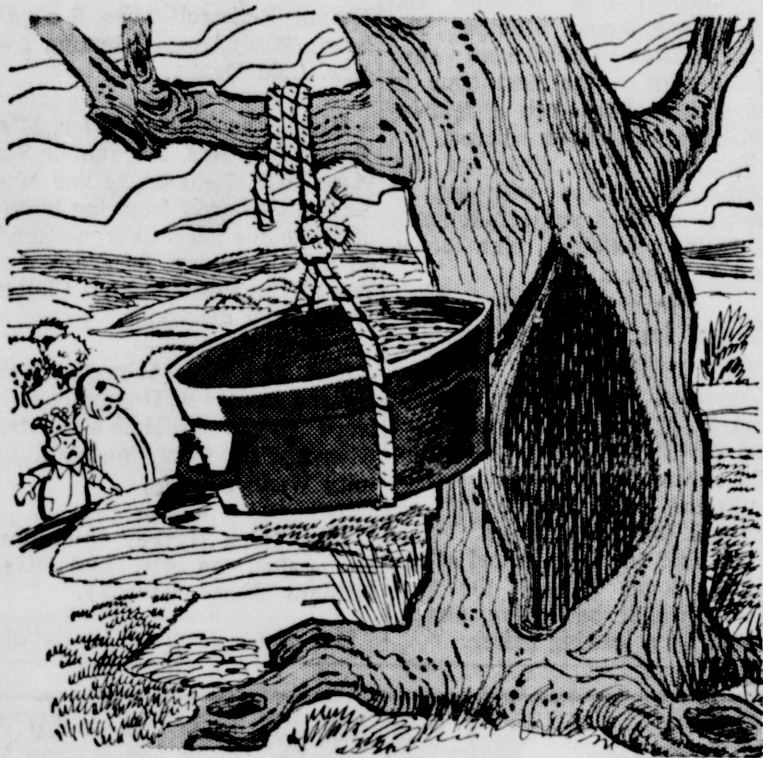

"This, as anyone can plainly see, is the elevator," retorted George. "Get in and it will take you to the railway."

Obediently, the Prince climbed into the tub. A moment later the ground seemed to give way and he swooshed through a thousand feet of darkness to land with a clank in a brightly lit railway station. There stood a little train, more like a trolley huffing and puffing and clanging its bell.

The Prince, his crown bent and askew, tumbled out of the tub. Immediately the elevator rose again to the surface and came swooshing back to dump the Snowman in several pieces beside the Prince on the station floor.

"Oh, dear!" exclaimed the Snowman, staggering around. "I've lost my one good eye!"

The Prince crawled about on his hands and knees until he found the hunk of black coal that was the poor fellow's remaining eye. He stuck it back in place and hastily repacked the arms that had been flung across the railway tracks. They were now quite uneven in length but serviceable just the same. Hardly had the Snowman been put together than the elevator returned with George. It deposited him upside down on the railway platform, covered not only by his own shell but by the tub as well. The Snowman lifted the tub and the Prince righted the turtle.

The little red trolley-train began to puff heavily and clang its bell quite furiously, indicating clearly that it was ready to start. The three travellers flung themselves aboard just as the wheels began to turn. They were so overcome by the whole experience they did not notice that the tub had landed again, this time bringing Womp, the man-witch, who raced after the trolley and just managed to fasten himself to the tail gate as the train shot off into a pitch black tunnel.

"Now is where you hope and pray!" shouted George and he shut his eyes and pulled his head all the way into his shell.

The Prince and the Snowman did the best they could. The Snowman could not close his one eye, but he raised his arms and wrapped them around his whole head. The Prince thought it would be unprincipally for him to hide his head, but he did shut his eyes tight and pulled his bent crown far down over his face.

There followed the wildest, loudest, scariest ride that man or beast ever dreamed of. The fiery little train leaped through the darkness. It bucked. It rocketed. It gyrated. It quivered. It soared. It left a flaming trail of sparks scattered in its wake. It hissed. It crackled. It gurgled. It backfired. It roared.

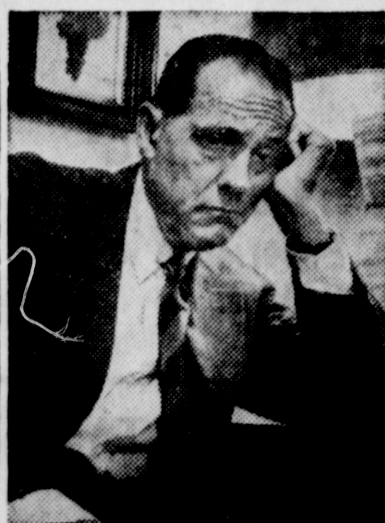

Suddenly it was all over and the train was standing in a snow-walled station. The Snowman dropped his arms. The Prince opened his eyes. George's head came out of his shell.

"Well," he said cheerfully. "It beats walking anyway!" And he led the way off the train.

Meanwhile, Womp, the man-witch pried loose his petrified fingers from the train's tail gate. His face was black with soot. His hair was singed down to the scalp. His teeth were chattering. His legs were like taffy candy.

"I'll get you, Prince Chad!" he swore furiously as he staggered dizzily away.

The World Today

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. J. W. Fulbright has a habit of making statements which rub against the American grain, for a time, and he gets criticized for them.

They are not self-righteous statements for he is an examiner of the American conscience and self-consciousness, a gadfly on this country's view of the world.

Nor are his statements original in the sense of proposing something new or unheard of. Rather, he acknowledges realities that are not being talked about or justified policies that exist but on a small or hesitant scale.

At times he is a tart critic of American policy. Added together or his statements are among the most thoughtful coming out of American public life, even if they are not all adopted.

Fulbright, an Arkansas Democrat and chairman of the Senate's Foreign Relations Committee, made another talk Tuesday at Dallas, this time about building bridges to the Communist world.

It was not popular for him during the 1961 Berlin crisis to say the West was not entirely blameless for Soviet pressure on the German City.

He said at the time: "We bear heavy responsibilities for the stupidities of this situation, which is to my shame, it is to anyone in the West. Certainly it was not just the fault of the Russians."

The Russians then were demanding permanent division of Germany and Allied abandonment of Berlin. They didn't get what they wanted and adjusted to the reality that they couldn't.

The Allies themselves had made concessions to the Russians in 1959 negotiations on Berlin. In short, both sides began years ago to accommodate themselves to the realization that neither side can compel the other to submit to its will without a war which would annihilate both. Their problem, then, is to learn to live together.

This was the main theme of Fulbright's speech Tuesday. It was certainly not original. But his talk was well-reasoned and realistic. Just because it was realistic, it will probably bring him some criticism.

He angered a number of people last March when he suggested, in effect, that President Johnson stop playing to the gallery in his handling of foreign affairs by yielding to the "malady of chronic and excessive caution."

He said then: "An effective foreign policy is one which concerns itself more with innovation abroad than with conciliation at home. It is sometimes necessary for leaders to do unpleasant and unpopular things."

How long will this country and communism have to accommodate themselves to the idea that neither is going to disappear and both will have to live side by side?

"As far into the future," Fulbright said Tuesday, "as we can see we shall be living in a world of diverse and often conflicting interests and ideologies."

And he added: "I do not think there is reason for despair in this state of things. Compromises often turn out to be very much more tolerable than they seem when they are being made and victories even more often turn out to be bitter disappointments. Democracy itself is built on this view of human nature."

He suggested this country try to build bridges to the various countries of communism — but not to Red China until some day its fanatics disappear and it ceases aggression and subversion — but he would vary the kind of bridges, depending on the particular Communist country.

"The building of bridges," he said, "means nothing more than the opening of normal contacts and communications across a chasm of misunderstanding."

This country has already done, and is doing, that although not on a feverish scale. So here again Fulbright was only stating the obvious but in a common sense way.

He said it is this country's "crusading tendency, so noble in intent, so potentially destructive in its consequences, that we must guard against in our relations with the Communists world."

Views on TV - Radio

By CYNTHIA LOWRY
AP Television-Radio Writer
NEW YORK (AP)—Monique Van Vooren finds that occasional, carefully selected appearances on television have a tonic effect on her career as a supper club singer and as a star in dramatic and musical stock.

Her favorite area of television exposure is panel or game programs.

"Television chews up material fast," she mourned. "If you are a singer playing the clubs, you can't expect the public to pay to listen to the same performance they have already seen — for nothing — on television."

On the other hand, she has found that the public likes to see in person the performers they have seen on the small screens. "So the panel show is perfect," she continued. "The public has a chance to know you. It is painless — no material to learn, no rehearsals — and your act is still fresh for the live audiences."

Financial rewards of the panel show are hardly startling by show business standards. The average professional signed for five daytime game shows usually gets $1,000 for the week's work. A one-shot guest appearance on a nighttime show pays the same amount.

The "Tonight Show" under Johnny Carson's begin reign pays the same $320 it maintained during the turbulent Jack Paar days. But Carson exposure is great for performers and they welcome invitations to appear.

Maurice Chevalier, looking perhaps a little older, was back exerting his ageless charm in a delightful Telephone Hour on NBC Tuesday night.

He sang some of his famous songs, even did a little dancing. The show — which was live — was a dandy and full of musical contrasts, from Pete Fountain's clarinet to Stanley Holloway's music hall songs.

Recommended tonight: "CBS Reports," 7:30-8:30 EST — "Segregation: Northern Style," documenting efforts of a middle-income Negro family to find a new home.

Prison Farm Probes Cache of Cheap Wine

LONDON, Ohio (AP) — Ohio Corrections Commissioner Maury Koblenz has asked the superintendent of London Correctional Institution for a complete report after officers said they found a cache of cheap wine along with some empty bottles in a chicken coop at the farm.

Authorities also were checking reports that four convict held a wine-drinking party Thanksgiving eve when a young girl was molested at the outskirts of the farm.

Indians OK $1 Million Legal Fee

KANAB, Utah (AP) — An attorney who has been helping Indians with their legal problems almost from the time he left law school says he will receive $1 million from one grateful tribe.

The fee is one of the biggest ever awarded in like circumstances.

The tribal council of the Hopi Tribe in northeast Arizona voted the sum this week for John S. Boyden of Salt Lake City, who helped win an important land case after 26 years of work.

The council said $778,000 was for legal fees and $220,000 was in appreciation for "taking the case when no one else would." The case involved a dispute with the nearby Navajo Indians over more than 2½ million acres of resource-rich land.

Under a lower court decision upheld last year by the U.S. Supreme Court, the tiny Hopi Tribe of 5,000 members received clear title to 631,000 acres and one-half interest in another two million acres.

"It is a wonderful opportunity for a wonderful group of people," said Boyden, who added that the land has a "known value in excess of $38 million."

"These people didn't have any income in their treasury when I started to represent them," he said.

"They are a very fine and progressive tribe. They take their education very seriously and now have 60 children in college."

He said the dispute between the Hopis and Navajos dated back to 1882 when the government established the Hopi Reservation.

He said members of the much larger Navajo Tribe claimed about two-thirds of the Hopi Reservation because they said the government settled them on the land.

Since the court award, Boyden said the Hopi Tribe has received $3 million in bonuses for rights to drill for oil. It also has leased rights to extract 200 million tons of coal, he said.

Boyden said his fee will come from the Indians' new-found wealth and will be divided with two associates who have worked with him on the case, Allen Tibbals and Bryan Croft, both of Salt Lake City.

Boyden received almost no money from the tribe during the years the case was before the courts because "the tribe had no money." He said he paid most court costs and fees himself.

Yule Tree Electrical Dangers Are Detailed

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — A warning to be careful with electrical wiring and dry evergreen trees during the Christmas season has been issued by state fire marshal Fred Rice. Rice said proper safety precautions should be taken, including the availability of a fire extinguisher.

The bullet-resistant glass canopy of the refurbished presidential limousine contains nearly a ton of specially developed glass to provide maximum security and visibility. The center back panel is the largest curved, bullet-resistant unit ever produced.

'Phenomenal Progress' Is Made By Industry in South Bend Area

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP)—One year ago today, Eugene Heilman, 41, father of two, was fired — along with 6,822 other employees of the Studebaker Corp. in South Bend.

The company, crippled by heavy losses and dismal sales, decided to halt car-making at its huge plant on the south end of this city of 132,445.

The city was stunned. Hard times had been few during the firm's 111 years in South Bend, but on that bleak Dec. 9 the city's unemployment rate soared from 2.1, a 10-year low, to a depressed-area level of 9.1.

For Heilman, Studebaker's decision was frightening. "It's all we know," his pretty blonde wife, Ruth, said in an interview then. "It means selling our property, our home and starting all over again."

A native of South Bend, Heilman like thousands of others — had spent most of his adult life working for Studebaker. His comfortable eight-room house was only four blocks from the plant.

Today the plant is a symbol of the city's determined efforts to avoid panic and meet its problems realistically.

Heilman is back at work at that plant in his job as an assembly-line foreman. But now he works for a new company, Kaiser Jeep Corp., one of four firms that moved to South Bend and relocated in the plant. The firms have hired 1,200 employees, most of them former Studebaker workers, and more are expected to be hired in the spring.

"I was real happy to come back to my old job," Heilman said in a recent interview. "We had no idea everything would turn out like this," added his wife.

Heilman began his new work June 1 after a series of short-lived jobs, including three months with a railroad in Chicago.

"I didn't like him living in Chicago by himself and me and the boys all alone," said Mrs. Heilman, "so with our savings I bought a small restaurant."

"And — wouldn't you know?" she asked happily. "As soon as we bought the restaurant he got called back to his old job."

What started South Bend back on the road was an energetic combination of civic pride and federal initiative.

President Johnson, once alerted to the city's needs, set up a special task force to coordinate efforts "to mitigate immediate hardship and promote long-term economic recovery."

The task force leased a section of the deserted Studebaker plant and set up a huge vocational training program under the Manpower Development and Training Act. Eventually 1,200 former Studebaker workers will be taught new professions and skills in the $281,000 program.

To help the 3,556 former Studebaker workers over 50, project ABLE was undertaken. Aimed at convincing local employers to hire the older workers, the program brought these quick results:

Within months 717 of the over-50 workers had steady jobs.

The number of persons on unemployment benefits dropped from 4,500 in December to 2,000 in April.

The unemployment rate fell steadily during the year. By Nov. 1 it was 5.9, slightly above the national average.

Says Clete H. Krueyer Jr., executive vice president of the First Bank and Trust Co., South Bend's largest:

"What's happened is that everybody overrated the effects of Studebaker's leaving."

Krueyer said the four major banks in the area recently reported they were ahead of 1963's pace in every savings-and-loan category.

"Most of the businessmen thought it would take three to five years to overcome this thing," said J. Frank Hartwig, executive director of the Committee of 100, "but we had phenomenal progress."

The committee, a civic organization devoted to attracting new plants and businesses, stepped up its activities after Studebaker left.

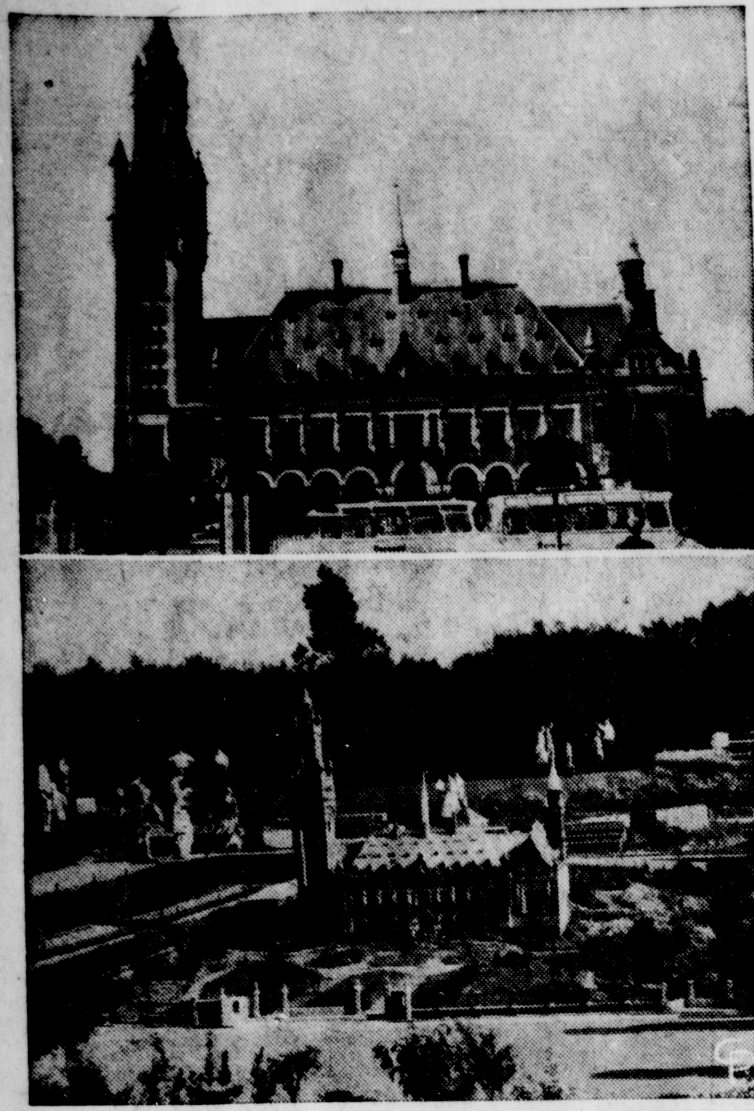

Along with the four companies at the old Studebaker plant, eight others began operations in the area in 1964. Hartwig said at least 12 more out-of-state firms have tentative agreements to move into South Bend in 1965 and are expected to hire 1,000 more former Studebaker workers.

Now financially stable, the South Bend area has one nagging problem: Unemployment is still too heavy. And despite the high promise for full employment in the future, life is bleak for those out of work now.

A year ago the loss of his job after 21 years was a shock to Thomas Carter, 47, and his family. "We planned on having a fine Christmas, but I just don't know what will happen now," he said then.

Carter finally found a construction job in July. Before that, his wife had worked for the first time in her life — as a maid earning $17 weekly.

This year there will be a difference, "I'm more hopeful," he said. "I hear the foundry is starting up at the old Studebaker plant again." Carter spent years working in the Studebaker foundry.

Miniature Madurodam Rated Holland's Lilliputian City

By JOE WILSON
Central Press Association
Correspondent

THE HAGUE, Holland — As Gulliver walked among the Lilliputians, so can the visitor to magic, make believe Madurodam. An ideal miniature city where everything is perfect and everyone is happy, tiny Madurodam is Utopia, Shangri-La, and the Garden of Eden of the Netherlands.

A living memorial to Lt. George Maduro, World War II hero who died in Dachau, Madurodam covers one acre in The Hague. It is the world's smallest city. All profits go to aid tubercular patients in the Netherlands Students Sanatorium in Laren, North Holland.

Built entirely to a scale of 1-25th of the actual size, Madurodam is a complete, perfectly planned city with the best of everything. Madurodammers take great pride in having as their royal burgomaster, Crown Princess Beatrix, eldest daughter of Queen Juliana.

Madurodam is the paragon of a Dutch city. Not one particular city, but a synthesis of all of Holland. Most of its buildings are miniature reproductions of existing ones. Nothing has been overlooked.

Trains travel on its 2 1/4 miles of miniature railways delivering freight as well as passengers on precision schedules. Boats move about the harbors and up and down the canals as drawbridges are raised and lowered.

The airport is a bustle of activity as departing and arriving flights are announced over the loud speaker system. Freeways handle large amounts of rush-hour traffic. It is so realistic that at one juncture there is an ambulance, complete with attendants who are administering first aid to the injured in an accident.

Typical Dutch farms, separated by canals, have the ever present windmills. Miniature cattle are dwarfed by real sparrows that happen by.

Amusement parks have ferris wheels, roller coasters and merry-go-rounds which actually operate. They are accompanied by the blare of carnival type music.

The Peace Palace, functioning now as the World Arbitration Court of the United Nations, has been reproduced in microscopic detail. The Huis ten Bosch, or Palace in the Woods, Queen Juliana's residence when she is in The Hague, is a miniature jewel.

There are castles, schools, churches of many denominations, cafes, a shopping center, homes, flats, oil fields, a limburger farm, tulip bulb fields, and even a tiny statue of Peter Hans Brinker who held his finger in the dike.

Perhaps Madurodam is most bewitching at night — 45,000 tiny electric light bulbs illuminate the homes, offices and streets. The lighthouse and radio tower send out their warning beacons and spotlights play on the castles. It is a fantasy fairland.

Madurodam is for children and adults alike.

A stop here gives a bird's-eye view of the Netherlands and her people. Besides this, it is an enchanting visit to a never-never land and a refreshing momentary flight from the harsh realities of today's world.

DOGS ARE PRETTY OLD

Q. This may not be a proper medical question but it came up in our science class last Spring when we discussed using dogs in testing medicines. For how long have dogs been domesticated?

A. We are certainly not experts in historic facts of this sort (and will probably be called to task by those who are) but we are generally interested in the subject of domestication of animals by man. As far as we can determine, the earliest animals which we refer to as dogs appeared in Jericho in about 7000 B.C. Dogs also appeared at about the same time in northwestern Europe. Incidentally, sheep were domesticated around 9000 B.C., well before the earliest evidence of domestication of either the dog or the goat.

"OUTGROWING" ASTHMA

Q. Do children "outgrow" asthma and hay fever?

A. Asthma, perhaps, but not hay fever or other allergic diseases. University of Colorado doctors made a survey of more than 500 children who suffered from allergic diseases. Whereas more than 50 per cent of asthmatics became symptom-free by age 13, this seldom occurred in children with hay fever or other allergic disorders. The doctors caution that while many children "outgrow" asthma, early and proper treatment is a "must" to prevent permanent damage.

Ohio House OKs Judicial Pay Hike Bill

Under the bill, which now goes to the Senate, the salary of the chief justice of the Ohio Supreme Court would be boosted from $22,500 to $24,500. Associate Supreme Court judges would receive $24,000 compared to $22,000 at present.

Appellate judges' pay would be raised from $18,000 to $21,000. The state's contribution to the salaries of common pleas judges would be hiked from $7,000 to $9,000 a year with the remainder of their pay to be determined on the basis of population. Maximum pay for common pleas judges in Ohio would be $20,500.

Also included were county and municipal judges. County commissioners would be permitted to hike the pay of county judges up to $2,000 a year. Maximum pay for municipal judges would be raised from $15,000 to $18,000 annually.

Other bills passed by the House included a Senate-passed measure giving department head status to the chairman of the Ohio Youth Commission. Sponsors, led by Rep. David D. Albrighton, R-Montgomery, asserted the law is needed to give the agency more administrative strength.

Another House-passed bill was designed to help with a particular problem involving Youngstown University. It allows the Board of Regents to accept land, construct buildings, and lease them to public colleges and universities.

The House in its afternoon session approved 109-8 a proposed constitutional amendment described by the Rhodes administration as the key to creation of 200,000 new jobs in Ohio.

The proposal, previously adopted by the Senate, would validate earlier legislation permitting the estate to set up an industrial loan program and to issue revenue bonds for loans to build and equip factories.

Sponsors said the resolution which now will be placed before the voters in the May primary is designed to overcome court objections. The Ohio Supreme Court held financing provisions in the original legislation were unconstitutional.

Duck Decoys Now Accepted As Good Mantelpiece Art

DODGEVILLE, Wis.—If you've been kind to your web-footed friends, there's a reward waiting for you at the nearest antique shop.

Duck decoys are the newest rage of the home workshop and folk art set, says Gynethe Mainwaring, a dealer, who is snapping up all she can get.

Home craftsmen have discovered that with a lot of work and polish an ugly wooden duckling can be turned into a hand-

Belt Buckle Unity Still Lacking

WASHINGTON (AP) — Three years ago today, the chief of the newly created Defense Supply Agency beamed at reporters and announced his first victory in a campaign to end wasteful buying practices by the armed services.

Folding his arms contentedly, Lt. Gen. Andrew T. McNamara said he had decreed that all the armed services should standardize on a single belt buckle design and that it would be made of black coated metal.

As it turned out, McNamara's victory claim was a bit premature.

Since then, the general has retired from the Army, his place in DSA has been taken by a Navy admiral — and the all-service belt buckle still isn't a reality.

There are those who believe it may never be.

The Defense Supply Agency was one of Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara's earliest ideas for saving millions of dollars.

He hopes to do this by combining the purchasing of thousands of items used by all the services — clothing, foods, auto parts, and many others. The aim: to eliminate duplication of efforts, sometimes even competition among the services for the same thing.

After creating DSA in late 1961, the secretary appointed Gen. McNamara — no relative — to head the new agency. The general was once the Army's chief quartermaster.

One of the first questions to confront the general was this one: Why should the services use different kinds of belt buckles?

Army, Navy and Air Force men wore gold or silver ones. They were less expensive than the metal buckles favored by the Marines.

The Marine buckle was said to come in handy opening beer bottles, but it wasn't this feature that made it more expensive. DSA said the relatively high cost of the Marine buckle was traceable to its heavy copper content.

Cuban Newspaper War

MIAMI (AP) — An unusual newspaper war has erupted in Miami's divided exile colony.

Followers of ex-President Fulgencio Batista, who was ousted in 1959 by Fidel Castro, have long published a free weekly newspaper called Patria (Fatherland). It criticizes exiles who fought for Castro against Batista and later left Castro. Now a rival giveaway called Replica (Reply) is being published.

Stacks of both weeklies are offered to exile business places. Some refuse one or the other, according to political belief. Some play it safe and refuse both. Many make both available to customers. Sometimes partisans of one or the other group round up the rival papers and burn them.

Classifieds

So Gen. McNamara stepped in and handed down his unification ruling.

The services and industry launched research and development programs. There were laboratory and field tests.

"Indications from field tests conducted by the services are that industry has been unable to produce an acceptable black buckle within reasonable cost limits," the supply agency told The AP.

Until this impasse is resolved — if ever — it appears that Army and Navy men will continue to wear the same buckle costing about 10½ cents each, airmen will support another variety costing about 13 cents and the Marines a third type costing about 35 cents.

Plenty of Talent To Be Found On Class A All-Ohio Grid Team

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Talent-seeking college coaches will find Ohio's smaller high schools a happy hunting grounds this year as they go after stand-out footballers.

Some of the finest players in a decade dot the Class A All-Ohio high school team picked for The Associated Press by district boards of sports editors from newspapers and radio-television stations.

Many of the Class A schools played, with success, against the larger Class AA squads, and the All-Ohio youngsters are certain to find high places on the nation's collegiate teams in the near future.

Leading the offensive corps, behind a stalwart hole-opening line, is sensational Jerry Click of Millersport. The 170-pound 5-11 senior, in the last two years at quarterback, has led his team to a 19-1 record, and tossed at least one touchdown pass in each of the 20.

In the two campaigns he's completed 149 of 261 passes for 2,945 yards and 44 touchdowns, and passed for 23 two-point conversions. On defense he intercepted 11 enemy aeries.

At halfback are Oberlin Firelands' great Ted Pechaitis and Montpelier's Larry Pressler, each 190 pounds and 6-1. Pechaitis scored 132 points in leading his team to its first clean campaign, while Pressler, who operated most of the time at quarterback, ran for 300 yards in 64 tries, and completed 61 of 114 passes for 890 yards and eight touchdowns.

Mike Beier of Fremont St. Joseph—the state's tenth-ranked team—won the fullback berth easily. He's never been in a losing game, and the 190-pound six-footer scored 98 points as he reached for 1,289 yards to outgain all opposition by 33 yards.

With Click and Pressler on the first team, and West Jefferson's Mike Healy picking up the second team signal—calling spot, there wasn't room for many quarterback eye-catchers. The likes of Dave Neil of New London, who led his team to a 9-1 mark after a 1-9 effort in 1963, finished among the honorable mentions.

But a player had to be a great one to make even the "honorable" list, for more than 15,000 boys were on the Class A teams.

Here are the selections:

Division championship.

Modzelewski, an ex-Giant, is a Browns' defensive tackle. Robustelli is a combination defensive end and assistant coach for the Giants.

Both have given the Browns a rough time before "Little Mo" came to the Browns this year in a trade for end Bobby Crespi.

"I talk to Robustelli about once a week," Modzelewski said. "I wanted to know how the Giants will react to the game. He says they'll be all out. It's like a championship game for them."

How about the Browns, who lost 28-19 to the second place St. Louis Cardinals Sunday?

"Everybody's back to normal," said Modzelewski. "The team felt dejected about the Cardinals game but I think the Browns are very high for this one."

The Browns lead St. Louis by a half-game and a victory Saturday would give Cleveland its first Eastern Division title since 1957. The Giants are last in the division race.

Modzelewski has been in pressure spots before. During his seven years with the Giants he played in six championship games.

"It will feel strange playing against my ex-teammates," he said. "Back in New York we used to work harder on the Browns game than for any other team."

"Everybody's back to normal," said Modzelewski. "The team felt dejected about the Cardinals game but I think the Browns are very high for this one."

The Browns lead St. Louis by a half-game and a victory Saturday would give Cleveland its first Eastern Division title since 1957. The Giants are last in the division race.

Modzelewski has been in pressure spots before. During his seven years with the Giants he played in six championship games.

"It will feel strange playing against my ex-teammates," he said. "Back in New York we used to work harder on the Browns game than for any other team."

How about the Browns, who lost 28-19 to the second place St. Louis Cardinals Sunday?

U.S. Aid on Ohio Seeks Migrants

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—The Ohio Committee on Migrant Labor wants the federal government to institute a supplemental farm labor program to meet the shortage of qualified migrant workers.

That recommendation was made Tuesday by the legislative subcommittee of the group as the governor's committee of 60 farm, business, civic and religious leaders wound up a two-day session.

The Rev. Clyde N. Rogers, of the Ohio Council of Churches, Columbus, reported that Ohio growers face a crisis next season because the government's bracero (imported workers) program is ending Dec. 31.

Stiff competition for migrant workers is expected to come from California and other states. California relies heavily on Mexican workers for its fruit and vegetable pickers while Ohio normally gets the bulk of its migratory labor force from Texas and Florida. Ohio officials fear that California and other states will move into Texas to recruit their labor.

The subcommittee called for the establishment of training programs "because it takes trained people to harvest crops the way they should be."

Other recommendations: —Request the Ohio Legislature to budget $60,000 in 1965 and $70,000 in 1966 for the education of migrant children. Last year the legislature appropriated $40,000 for this purpose. —Grant 90-day truck licenses to migrants at a reduced fee. —Establish an overnight rest camp in northwest Ohio.

Barry . . .

"We can't get along just organizing the party for a presidential campaign every four years," Taft said.

Burch, fighting for his job, said Monday he plans to take his case to the 132 committee members with a letter spelling out his ideas on the issues facing the party, including leadership.

He said he expects to send out his position statement Thursday.

The GOP chairman has declared both he and Goldwater can endorse a policy statement made last week by the 18 Republican governors and governors-elect. They urged the National Committee to "adopt leadership which clearly represents a broad view of Republicanism and practices a policy of inclusion, rather than exclusion."

Some governors, including Nelson A. Rockefeller of New York, George Romney of Michigan and Scranton, said Burch does not fit that prescription for party leadership.

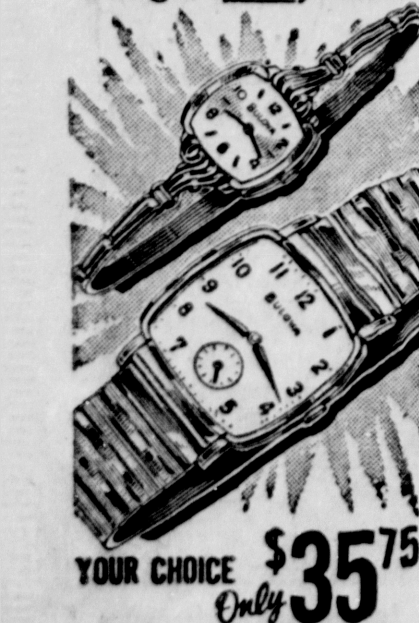

Burch insisted he never followed a policy of exclusion in guiding the National Committee.

Burch got praise Tuesday from Sen. Thurston B. Morton, himself a former national chairman, for presenting a financial surplus at the end of the campaign.

But Morton, who heads the GOP Senatorial Campaign Committee, conceded there hadn't been enough money for some Republican Senate candidates and that he attempted to raise funds independently.

Scotch-lite safety tape will be attached to the rear fenders of all bicycles that are brought to the National Guard Armory. The program will be conducted from 10 a. m. to 4 p. m.

The program will be conducted in cooperation with the local Bicycle Safety Committee and Circleville Police.

A safety film will be shown through the day for all bike riders. The movie will run continuously throughout the day, according to Eddie Evans, president of the Devastators.

ADMISSION to the movie can be gained by the presence of one bicycle. Evans said a note from parents explaining why youngsters are not riding their bikes also will be acceptable as admissions.

Refreshments will be served during the day.

Laurelville Levy Defeated

A three mill operating levy for the Laurelville School district was defeated 302-225 yesterday in a special election.

The board of education sought the levy — which was an addition of three mills rather than a renewal — to provide funds for school maintenance and teacher salary increases.

In the village the vote was 137 for and only 45 against. It also passed by a count of 68-50 in the Salt Creek Twp. polling precinct, but was defeated 207-50 in South Perry.

The levy had been previously

Many Mourn for 'Her'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Animal lovers from 7 to 70 have written to President Johnson and his family by the hundreds to extend sympathy on the death of the White House beagle puppy named Her. About 400 letters have come in since Her died almost two weeks ago. Included were about 300 offers of dogs or other animals — even a calf.

Her and Him, brother and sister, belonged to Luci, the 17-year-old daughter of the President. Johnson showed delight in walking them around the White House lawn, and they received widespread publicity when he held them up by their ears.

Her swallowed a stone the day after Thanksgiving and died.

"We have a beagle, too, so we tied a black string around our beagle's collar and will keep it on for 30 days to show mourning," 8-year-old Dean Long in McHenry, Ill., wrote the White House.

In the careful hand of a child, on lined paper, Joanne Long of Markesan, Wis., wrote that her family had named two Angus calves after the Johnson beagles.

"I'll send you our calf named Her to you if you like. But you may not want her on the white-house (sic) lawn," Joanne wrote.

Laurie Kay Meacham of Seattle, Wash., wrote that she had eight hamsters and would like to send Luci one. Margaret Delaney, 7, of Oak Park, Ill., wrote that she had renamed her beagle Her so "you can come to see her and I will come to see you." The White House has declined all offers of pets following a policy set soon after Johnson became President.

Tuesday after again explaining the policy, it returned a feline beagle puppy sent by E. D. Hollstein of Rushville, Neb. It sent Holstein a picture of the President and the two beagles, autographed "from one dog over to another."

About half the sympathy letters have come to Luci, the rest to Johnson or to him and the family.
